

Peak District National Park Year of Green Action – Ideas for Communities to Improve Your Environment

You might choose to help established groups with environmental work:

We have more than 140 RSPB local groups around the UK. Make new friends, learn about our amazing wildlife and support our work to help give nature a home.

Volunteering with us is a great way to gain skills and experience in conservation or simply contribute to the protection and enhancement of wildlife in your local area!

We welcome enquiries from anyone across the local community, regardless of background or experience.

Volunteers are the lifeblood of the Trust.

Without you we would not be able to manage our nature reserves and restore Derbyshire's wild spaces, we wouldn't be able to run our charity shops effectively or carry out our important education work. From several days a week to a few hours a month, you can choose how much time to give, and all of it is greatly appreciated.

If you like doing 'hands on' outdoor practical work the Peak Park Conservation Volunteers (PPCV) could be for you.

Volunteers of all ages and backgrounds are welcome - on your own or in a group. You can even stay at one of our volunteer centres. PPCV offers the opportunity to put something back and understand and help protect this unique area in a way that is positive, informal and great fun.

We couldn't get the work done without volunteer support so some help is always appreciated. Here you can find out more about current opportunities.

We have a range of volunteering opportunities currently available at Moors for the Future Partnership.

Peak District National Park Year of Green Action – Ideas for Communities to Improve Your Environment

To celebrate the Year of Green Action a number of staff and volunteers in the Peak District National Park will be taking on the challenge of completing a John Muir Award You might want to complete one as a group, individual or family. The Award is completely free to undertake and will support you in your project.
